Every day in California, there are friends, family and co-workers who struggle with emotional pain. And, for some, it's too difficult to talk about the pain, thoughts of suicide and the need for help. Though the warning signs may be subtle, they are there. By recognizing the signs, finding the words to start a conversation and reaching out to local resources, you have the power to make a difference. The power to save a life.

The warning signs of suicide aren’t always obvious. Reach out and help if you observe one or more of these warning signs, especially if the behavior is new, has increased or seems related to a painful event, loss, or change:

- Talking about wanting to die or suicide
- Looking for a way to kill themselves, like searching online or buying a gun
- Feeling hopeless, desperate, trapped
- Giving away possessions
- Putting affairs in order
- Risky behavior
- Uncontrollable anger
- Increased drug or alcohol use
- Withdrawal
- Anxiety or agitation
- Changes in sleep
- Sudden mood changes
- No sense of purpose

Knowing what to look for is the first step toward being there for a friend or family member in need. If you sense something is wrong, trust your instincts and get more information at suicideispreventable.org.
